

I am disgusted with the decision to change the "legal footing" of net neutrality rules from Title II to Title I. It seems to be political "jiggery-pokery" in the words of late Justice Antonin Scalia.

Not only does this potential change weaken regulations ALL consumers want, but corporations such as Verizon, AT&T, T-Mobile, and the like do not mind the Title II classification.

I am disgusted in this administration's appointees to their respective federal agencies not excluding Ajit Pai. All of these appointees seem to want to dismantle their respective agencies, and we're not going to stand for it. So if you think you're going to change net neutrality, you're going to have a big fight on your hands as the people of the US WILL NOT stand for this.
